A salary survey conducted last summer has recommended that EWSC's administration increase efforts to hire and promote women and minorities.

The three-week survey evaluated 43 administrative positions and was conducted by Robert H. Hayes and Associates at a cost of $12,000.

After evaluating the positions, the survey firm placed them in 12 salary grades. The positions were placed in a salary grade on a point-system basis.

Director of Financial Aid Susan Shackette is the highest paid woman in EWSC's administration.

Ms. Shackette's salary ranks 22nd among the 43 positions evaluated. She is the only woman whose salary is in the top 50 per cent of the present administrative salaries.

Director of Housing

Admin. Lacks Minorities

Salary Flaws Shown

Marianne Hall is getting paid less than Ms. Shackette even though the housing position was evaluated higher by the survey.

Ms. Hall is also the lowest paid individual in her salary range.

Last year Ms. Hall was promoted to Director of Housing when Fred Heineman was appointed Director of Auxiliary Enterprise.

Heineman's salary as Director of Housing was $3,000 per year more than what Ms. Hall now gets paid.

Vice President of Academic Affairs Philip Marshall explained that at the present time there are no set salaries for administrative positions.

"The salary we pay is the salary that's necessary," said Marshall. "Ms. Hall did get an increase in pay when she was appointed Director of Housing but the raise is made in regard to what the person was making before the promotion."

Marshall also explained that Ms. Hall's salary is lower than others in the same pay grade because she has held the position for a short time.

Aside from Ms. Hall and Ms. Shackette, there are nine other females listed as administrative personnel.

Women At Bottom

Eight women, out of these nine, fill the bottom four pay grades established by the survey.

Numbering even fewer than the women employees in the administration are minorities. There are only two.

The director and assistant director of the Black Education Program represent all the minorities within EWSC's administration.

Both positions were vacant at the time of the survey so they were not evaluated.

Goal Not Reached

Marshall said that although EWSC has been working on an Affirmative Action Program for five years, the goal for employing minorities in the administration has not been reached.

"When we stated the Affirmative Action Program the percentage of minorities rose sharply in the faculty and in civil service jobs," said Marshall.

"The problem we have in the administration," he said, "is that we have a very small turnover because we employ so few people."

Few Employed

Since the salary survey, there has been only one opening in the administration.

"We had to hire a new director of the physical plant because the person we had went to work in South Dakota," said Marshall. "By the way, he was an Indian," he added.

Even when a position is vacated, the chances of anyone getting hired are very slim.

"The administration needs the money," said Marshall. "When a position is vacated we rearrange the duties of the existing personnel so they can do the work of that position."

"In short, we simply do not fill most vacated positions so we can save money for other purposes," he said.

AFT Might Aid Minor

Local 1823 of the AFT voted not to pay previous legal expenses incurred by Dr. Charles Minor during the past year. But it left the door open to paying Minor's future bills, according to Dan Perdue, vice president of the group.

Perdue said the AFT's denial of Minor's request does not mean the organization will not aid Minor in paying legal expenses incurred in his future defense against the school's efforts to obtain his dismissal.

Perdue also said that the local AFT has limited funds, but that Minor has the option of requesting aid for his previous expenses from the state AFT organization.

In a joint statement, Perdue; Wes Stone, president of the local AFT; and Dave Daugherty, chairman of the Grievance Committee said: "The Local voted to support Charles Minor's right to due process through the college appeals procedure. If this requires the aid of an attorney, we are confident that financial support will be forthcoming. Furthermore, if it becomes clear, during the College appeals process, that Dr. Minor should be defended in court, the support should be continued."

Three Non-legislators Given Speaking Right

A bill providing legislative speaking rights to the AS president, PUB business director and vice president of Student Services was passed unanimously by the AS Legislature Monday.

The bill will allow the three representatives to participate in discussion at legislature meetings on the same level as legislators.

Proponents of the bill maintained that communications between the legislature and the representatives would be improved because the trio would not be bound by regular legislative procedures.

Whitworth College Student Body President Craig Grant went before the legislature with a presentation calling for the endorsement of Initiative HJR 19.

HJR 19 would permit state assistance to students of all educational institutions (Particularly private institutions).

The Legislature refused to endorse the initiative because no opposing views were presented.

The legislature also voted to fund the EWSC Percussion Ensemble for a total of $400.

The ensemble was given $100 to help fund a recording project and $300 to subsidize travel expenses.

Because the ensemble group is now funded by the AS Legislature, all profits made through the sale of recordings will go back to the AS General Fund.

Should the EWSC Percussion Ensemble need the money raised by the sale of recordings, it would have to request that the legislature donate the money back to it.

Legislators 'Drop Out'

AS Legislators Kelly Williams and April Stark both resigned their positions on the legislature this week.

Ms. Williams resigned from Legislative Position No. 13 and Ms. Stark resigned from Legislative Position No. 4.

Both Legislators cited personal and academic reasons for their resignations.

With Speaker Pro-Tem Ike Higgins' resignation last week, a total of three legislators have resigned in the past two weeks.

The three resignations left the legislature with five vacant seats at last Monday's meeting.

All the vacant positions were filled in the general election yesterday except Position No. 13.

Position No. 13 was not up for election this quarter. AS President Tom Hampson can appoint a legislator to fill that position.

Alternatives Offered Non-Residents

By Kevin Harris
Staff Writer

Are you an out-of-state student paying non-resident fees, suffering from lack of pennies in your pocket and no food in your stomach?

For those unfortunate ones there is a way to beat the out-of-state tuition fees according to the Admissions Office.

These exceptions, or loopholes in the system, will automatically qualify a non-resident student for residency status.

Admissions Director E. Clair McNeal said that students employed in excess of 20 hours weekly at a Washington institution of higher education are automatically qualified for residency.

In addition if a student has a spouse and children and meets the above requirement his family is eligible also.

McNeal stated further these exceptions to the rule which can qualify a person automatically: if he has military officer status, is a federal employee, a war veteran whose last base assignment was in this state receiving VA benefits, and/or a student with a graduate assistantship or fellowship.

Any out of state student, according to McNeal, should be well acquainted with the requirements of both the school and the law which they must meet in order to become Washington residents.

Information regarding those requirements may be acquired at the admissions office said McNeal.

Assertive Training Workshop To Be Held

By Debbie Akers
Staff Writer

According to Eastern's Women Commission there is an expressed desire among some EWSC women to be trained in Verbalization.

"Every person has the right to communicate and must take the responsibility for that communication," says Dr. Correen Morrill of the Education Department. This is the basis of a two-part Assertive Training Workshop Dr. Morrill will conduct Thursday, October 23 and Thursday, October 29. Both sessions will meet at 7:30 p.m. in Pub 121.

Originally Assertive Training programs were developed for men and very anxious people, but it was later discovered that women talk less than men and recent research repeatedly indicates that women have difficulty in stating opinions without apology. They are generally more supportive of others than they are of themselves.

"Women often allow others to take care of the communication. Their entry into conversation is disregarded so they give up or become irritated and then out of frustration become aggressive," says Dr. Morrill.

This does not mean that men do not have problems asserting themselves also. The workshop is geared so as to provide for the needs of both men and women.

Through participation in small group exercises students will learn how to enter a conversation, how to state an opinion, how to say no, and how to deal with people who butt in during conversation. Students will be encouraged to practice these exercises in real life situations during the interim week. The second session will be an evaluation of the results of this practice. "What progress was made?" or perhaps "Why wasn't progress made?"

"Hopefully participants will also come to a better understanding of why they are un-assertive", said Dr. Morrill.

Phone Lines Cut

By Chuck St. John
Staff Writer

In an effort to cut back expenditures for telephone services on campus, the office of Campus Services has initiated some policy changes and reductions in telephone availability for faculty and staff according to Lois Butler, telephone systems analyst.

Faculty and staff use of SCAN (State Controlled Access Network) and FEX (Foreign Exchange Service) lines to make long distance calls is being limited in hopes of cutting the cost. SCAN line calls cost seven cents per minute while FEX calls cost five cents per minute.

SCAN line calls can be made from anywhere in the state from community colleges, state universities and colleges and the state legislature. SCAN is owned by the state. Eastern has six outgoing SCAN lines.

Eastern's ten FEX lines are hooked directly with Spokane.

Twenty-eight Cut

According to Ms. Butler there are 1,583 telephone lines on campus, including 1,025 in the dorms. The remaining 558 faculty and staff lines will be cut back to approximately 530.

These reductions will be made by placing two faculty members on one line. Changeovers will begin Oct. 22 and will hopefully be finished by Nov. 1 said Ms. Butler.

According to Ms. Butler, the office of Campus Services spends over $220,000 per year for faculty and staff telephone services.

Marianne Hall, Housing Director, said that the dorm phones cost about $4.55 per month per phone or $4,660 total. This is paid for out of the student's room payments.

Access Limited

In accordance with the new policy only numbers with a 2200, 2300 or 2400 prefix will have direct SCAN line access along with FEX. Numbers with a 2800, 7000 or 7900 prefix will have access to only direct FEX access.

In view of voluntary curtailment of long distance calls, Ms. Butler said the PE department has made major cutbacks.

Ms. Butler recommends that the long distance calls be kept to a minimum and limited to three-minutes. Since a limited number of SCAN and FEX lines are available she recommends that these calls be made between 7:30 and 9:00 a.m., 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. or after 3:00 p.m. Other times are extremely busy and can create problems at the switchboard.

Ms. Butler said the new staff directories will be out in two to three weeks. Cheney directories will come out in November and the SCAN directories in January.

Program Scheduled

Eastern Washington State College University Year of ACTION (UYA) program officials will be in eight cities to interview persons interested in the program.

Glen L. Elkins, assistant director of the EWSC program, said placement offices of community colleges in the cities will accept appointments or furnish more information.

Enrollments will also be taken and information furnished at the EWSC ACTION office for the year-long program which will start in January.

ACTION offers nine months of preprofessional work experience, $200 a month, medical insurance and full academic credit, Elkins said. Enrollees must be of junior or higher standing in college or demonstrate compensating maturity or experience.

Participants work in a school or social agency 30 hours a week and attend classes for 10 more hours. A year of such preprofessional internship is often equivalent to a master's degree on the labor market, he said.

Dates and locations of interviews include:

Nov. 4, North Idaho College, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Nov. 6, North Seattle Community College, Seattle.

Nov. 7, Central Seattle Community College, Seattle.

Nov. 12, Big Bend Community College, Moses Lake.

Nov. 13, Wenatchee Valley College, Wenatchee.

Nov. 14, Yakima Valley College, Yakima.

Nov. 20, Walla Walla Community College, Walla Walla.

Nov. 21, Columbia Basin College, Pasco.

Vandals struck Showalter Hall and Tawanka Commons over the weekend. According to Campus Safety, the letters above the main entrance to Showalter were rearranged and letters from the Science Building were placed over the entrance to Tawanka.

A Campus Safety pickup truck received approximately $400 worth of damage when it was struck by a vehicle driven by Deb Hodgson, Pearce Hall, on Oct. 19.

According to the Campus Safety report, Hodgson's 1963 Impala failed to stop at a stop sign and struck the Campus Safety vehicle in the right rear bumper and fender.

No one was injured in the incident and Campus Safety reported that both vehicles were insured.

Over $500 worth of visual aid equipment has been missing from IMC in Kennedy Memorial Library since last spring.

Three overhead projectors, valued at $450, and a Bell and Howell cassette recorder, valued at $45, were reported missing to Campus Safety Oct. 16.

William Maxson, chairman of the music department, reported to Campus Safety that two flutes, a cello, a violin, and a piccolo have apparently been missing from the department since sometime before Oct. 13.

A battery was stolen from a car parked outside Morrison Hall on Oct. 18.

According to the report, Wale Shitu, Spokane, was attending a dance at Morrison when the battery was stolen.

Morrison Hall had a false fire alarm on Oct. 15.

Dressler Hall had a false fire alarm early in the morning of Oct. 16.

Two short bursts of the fire alarm were reported in Pearce Hall shortly after midnight Oct. 17.

BEP Sees Changes

Eastern has experienced a drop in current Black student enrollment.

The number of black students enrolled this fall is 140 compared to 190 last year, according to Pat Singleton, Student Services officer with the Black Education Program.

The BEP has "tightened up on its grade point average requirements", he said.

Minimum GP Raised

"Formerly, students were admitted with grade point averages of less than 2.0."

The minimum grade point average has been raised to 2.5 for incoming freshmen, he said.

The BEP was founded in 1972 to service the needs of black students on campus. Its purpose is to create and implement programs to heighten Black awareness and Black culture and to assist Black students in areas of academic and financial counseling.

New Classes Offered

The math and English classes were designed primarily for freshmen although others who need to "brush up" in those areas are also permitted to enroll.

Three courses have been omitted from the programs roster and are being replaced by two additional selections.

Black Drama, Swahili, an east African language, and Study Skills have been replaced with Basic English(196) and Basic Math(299).

Earn Credit For Bicentennial Project

By Colleen McFarland
Staff Writer

Across the nation there are those who are actively involved in celebrations and observances of the United States' 200th birthday. However, real involvement is much closer to home.

What we should be concerned about is the "real happening" going on right here in our community and on our campus, said Dr. Glen Fuglsby, Chairman of EWSC's Bicentennial Coordinating Council.

A few of the more recent or planned activities include:

The Red Barn Program, a co-operative community-EWSC project, which has restored a barn constructed in the early 1900's. The barn is now used as a sight for classes and workshops revitalizing traditional American handicraft-skills.

—Alpha Psi, a campus drama fraternity is constructing an "open air summer theatre" for outdoor performances, near the Red Barn.

—All drama productions presented in the college theatre during the year will have a bicentennial theme.

—The Sponsor Corp, ROTC, has offered to serve as hostess for gatherings and festivities during the bicentennial era.

—A Symposium entitled, "A Look To The Future

(1976-2000)", for business leaders, students, and professors is scheduled for the week of April 5, 1976.

Eastern Washington State College, in its role as a Bicentennial College, offers the first in a hoped series of workshops today at 2 p.m. in Kennedy Auditorium. The primary objective is to encourage and assist in the development of bicentennial activities, stressing student awareness and involvement.

EWSC students can earn 1 college credit while "doing their own thing" and getting involved in bicentennial programs, ideas, and activities by observing the following criteria:

—Attend Bicentennial Activities Planning Workshop

—Develop an initial plan and complete the planning form, one copy to be given at close of workshop to Dr. Glen Fuglsby.

—Refine and implement plan during the 1975-76 year.

—Submit an activities planning form signed by appropriate authority verifying that your plan has been completed and mail to Dr. G. Fuglsby, EWSC, Cheney, Washington 99004.

The cost is $17 per credit which includes the workshop participation and material costs and the grading system will be Pass-No Credit.

These bicentennial projects should address one or more of the three basic themes: Heritage, Festival, or Horizons.

Heritage '76 emphasizes our legacy, traditions, birthright—things passed down from preceding generations.

Festival USA is firmly focused on people, the sights and sounds of all our people—the multiplicity of their ideas, their expressions and interests which convey the diversity and vitality of our culture.

Horizon's '76 is primarily future oriented. It is looking

Newsman Tells of "Superagency"

By Steve Hanna
Staff Writer

"There exists in the United States today an intelligence organization which spends more money and is more secret than the C.I.A. and is capable of turning a window into a microphone by shooting it with a laser beam."

Veteran CBS news correspondent Daniel Schorr startled his audience with that information in a speech here last week.

Some 800 students and faculty members crowded into Showalter Hall auditorium to hear Schorr's lecture, titled "The CIA and the Invasion of Privacy."

Schorr revealed for the first time to many listeners the existence of the National Security Agency (NSA).

No one knows much about the NSA, except that it was created not by legislative act but by the executive order of President Harry S. Truman. It is known, however, that the technological advancements of this highly computerized agency outdate all wiretapping and bugging laws, according to Schorr.

Schorr said the public should beware of three areas in particular concerning U.S. intelligence activities. One of these areas was the secrecy and capability of the NSA.

Warnings Given

Schorr also warned his listeners about organizations such as the CIA, NSA, and FBI becoming too independent and acting as separate units, exempt from law and administrative authority.

He also cautioned the audience against CIA alliances with big business.

Much of what he said about the history of the CIA and its illegal activities has already appeared in newspaper and magazine articles.

He said he didn't think the CIA was involved in the Kennedy assassination because "I deal with ascertainable facts." But because the CIA and FBI were "too embarrassed" to admit to such things as having had contacts with Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the assassination, the whole case is on the verge of being reopened, he said.

Disbandment Opposed

He pointed out that the CIA definitely should not be disbanded because of the good, valuable information it provides. He said hopefully someday the "cloak and dagger" image of the CIA will disappear.

Schorr's experience as a newsman was evident as he captivated his listeners during the entirety of his hour-long speech. He smoothly, understandably, and at ease, occasionally interjecting humorous comments.

The 59-year-old Schorr has been a journalist since the age of 18, with the last 22 years as news correspondent in Washington for CBS News. He is most noted for his work as a Watergate reporter.

Schorr's lecture sponsored by the Associated Students Contemporary Issues Bureau, is one of about 20 he gives at colleges and business conventions each year.

Shocking Event Recalled

The most memorable event of his professional career occurred during John Dean's Watergate testimony in 1973, he said. "Copies of Nixon's top twenty enemy list had just been distributed and I rushed off to the side in an attempt to break the news first," said Schorr. "The cameras were rolling and I hadn't had a chance to go over the list. I got down to number 14 and saw my own name. It was extremely difficult not to stop and say 'Wow, and to keep reading as if it were just another name,' he said.

Schorr said after his speech that he was disliked by Presidents Johnson, Kennedy, and Eisenhower as well as Nixon.

"One night President Johnson called at midnight and called me a S.O.B. because of a story I had reported that he wanted kept secret," Schorr said.

Schorr was also the target of a harassing and intimidating investigation in 1971 by the FBI. They claimed to be checking him out for a job — of which Schorr had no previous knowledge.

Nixon White House aides had an insider's code for designating adversaries in which they inserted the initial "P" (for an obscenity) into their names. Schorr was known as "Daniel P. Schorr."

Following his speech, Schorr answered questions from the audience and the press before going back to Washington, D.C.

"How would you like to be remembered in the history books?," a local TV newsman asked Schorr.

He replied quickly and simply, "As a veteran newsman, with a wife and three children."

Cheap Advice

Letters to this column may be left in the Pub suggestion box or at the Easterner office . . . please?

Dear Sunni,
I'm in the Navy and recently I found a girl's name and phone number scribbled on the bathroom wall of the men's room. Strange thing is that next to it were 4 stars in a row. What do you think that meant?

Dear Starry,
Well, if a sailor put four stars next to her name, I doubt very much if it was for perfect attendance.

Dear Sunni,
I took a tab of LSD last year and since then I cannot tell what is real in this world and what is not. Can you help me... is there anything in existence that is the real thing?

Dear Higho,
Try Coca-Cola.

Dear Sunni,
My boyfriend wants me to wear a rabbit suit any time he wants to "get hoppin'". Meanwhile he dresses in a wolf suit. The mailman came by, saw us and since then stopped all delivery here. What to do?

Dear Ear,
Personally I'd grab my white cotton tail and hop right past him. Tell the mailman you've enacted the leash law at your house. If all else fails send yourself to the Pope. I hear he loves women who act like rabbits.

Dear Sunni,
Every time I go out into the rain, my make-up runs, my hairdo falls. I don't want to look any less beautiful than my female counterparts so what do I do about my wet head?

Dear Wet,
Brown Bag it.

Archeology Study Conducted

By Ken Bondy
How many times have you watched enraptured as a youngster builds a mountain or a castle in his sand box? Most of us at one time or another have relished the thought of returning to our youth where total enjoyment could be extracted so cheaply from this complex world.
Remember mud pies? Even now if we get too close to a farmers field after a rain there is that almost uncontrollable urge to shed shoes and socks so we can once again experience the unexplainable pleasure of feeling the mud squish through our toes as memories of pies of a bygone time dance in our heads.

The students of History 107 are going to get their chance to return to those grand amusements of childhood days. Dr. Fred Lauristen, a member of the history department and co-ordinator of the project, stated that these students will be conducting what he referred to as an archaeological dig on the grounds behind Hargreaves Hall.
He said that the primary purpose of the dig is to acquaint the student with the intricate procedures involved in an operation of this nature.
He also said that the students will be involved with the compilation of a history of the people represented by their finds.

No Sense of Humor

By Rob Strenge
Managing Editor

Last night's edition of the Spokane Daily Chronicle ran a story on the front page in which "Campus Security Chief Barney Issel quoted a letter he received" from the people who pulled down signs around the campus last weekend.

The letter was written to demand a nonsensical form of ransom from the college in the form of bubblegum cards and pennies, but what the authors of the letter were really looking for was public attention.

What neither the Chronicle nor Issel bothered to mention was that the letter was originally mailed to The Easterner last Monday. We didn't run it. We don't feel that sophomoric destruction merits publicity.

The letter contained an explicit threat of more vandalism on campus. This sort of cheap humor just isn't all that damn funny. If it's fed by publicity, it could get expensive next time. Somebody's going to have to pay for it if it does.

The Easterner would like to propose that the next time the "Cheney Liberation Army" strikes, the college simply send the bill for damages to the Chronicle and Campus Security Chief Barney Issel.

That's the only way we can see to make this situation really humorous.

Candidate Apathy?

By Dennis Reedy
News Editor

It is now the aftermath of another election and I would guess that there were quite a few students that did not even know about it, let alone vote.

In fact the only way I knew about the general election was because last week I heard about the primaries a couple of days after it was over.

Using by deductive powers it seemed only natural that there would be a general election sometime thereafter, although I did not bother to vote.

Why should a person vote if he has never even heard of the candidates running, let alone know what their politics are—if they have any.

Choosing candidates by a flip of the coin is even more worthless than elections that are popularity contests.

A couple of years ago I wrote a satire for the Easterner which was critical of voter apathy on campus.

It also poked fun at candidates who spent great sums of money putting up campaign signs in an attempt to sway voters to their side.

I thought things were pretty bad then and could not get much worse. I was wrong.

Now it seems that in addition to voter apathy there is an apathy on the part of the candidates. I can not really say if it is the candidates' fault, the students' fault, or my own.

If I had found out sooner that there was going to be an election, I might have had time to write a satire about it.

Letters to the Editor

Equal Time

This is in regards to the editorial and opinion columns of your last issue dating 10/16. These columns clearly stated a one-sided opinion against reinstatement of the death penalty. My purpose in writing this is to state my opinion and the opinion of many other people you so flagrantly ignored. After all, shouldn't a paper such as ours cover both sides of a controversy? Or is it following in the footsteps of many of the other forms of the media that can so greatly misguide and misinform the public?

I am flexible enough in my own views that I can tolerate and appreciate another person's view. I feel the opinion I hold is valid, and widespread and for this reason I feel the paper did an injustice for ignoring this other point of view. Surely, there would be no initiative at all if there were not some support for its reinstatement.

I am for reinstating the death penalty. It can effectively rid society of destructive, unbalanced and dangerous people. The factor of economics must be recognized too, for to send someone to prison for life, the cost to society is enormous.

Everybody talks a real fine rehabilitation story. But is rehabilitation really doing the job? Carl Bowles thinks so for he was free—for a while—and was responsible for the death of an innocent couple. These prisoners are looking at life in prison. Their only way out is to play good and look rehabilitated. And to act good is to be good in many people's eyes. Through rehabilitation programs, murderers have a road back to freedom whether they have or have not in actuality been rehabilitated at all.

And how many times must the same crime be committed by the same person before someone decides there is no hope for this criminal? Many of these "lifers" are one, two and even three time losers. You say you abhor the idea of a death penalty. Well I abhor repeat performances. Why give them another chance? What do I owe them? What do you owe them? What do we all owe them?

When initiative 316 comes up, you can be sure I will vote in favor of it. I do not want to feel responsible or guilty for yours or anyone else's death at the hands of a murderer who passed the written part of the rehabilitation exam and was set free. Voting in favor of the measure will assure me that I have at least tried to protect us all.

Enthusiasm Damp

Dear Editor,

As a member of the E.W.S.C. Band, I feel the time has come to inform the students, the faculty and the administration who are not aware of the injustice done to the members of that group.

What marching involves is rehearsals daily on Woodward Field in weather that most often is cold and windy and frequently wet and rainy. Due to the fact the music department doesn't have enough school owned instruments to check out, we are expected to take out our expensive and privately owned instruments in these weather conditions. Then every performing Saturday we are expected to be at the field at 10:00 a.m. to rehearse and stay all day through the end of the game—usually 4:30 p.m. If we work, have other engagements, or just want some time to ourselves for homework or whatever else, we might just as well forget about it because our responsibility as a member of the band is to be there.

Speaking for the majority of the band members, we don't want to march. But there are two reasons why we are forced to do this. First, a music major requires that one must be in a major ensemble every quarter and second, it is a direct order from President Shuck that the band will march every fall.

The kind of music we work on fall quarter for the most part is marches in preparation for these half-time shows. I don't feel that march music such as "Rock A Bye Your Baby With A Dixie Melody" or "Rock Around the Clock" enriches my study and performance as a serious music student. I don't see why the band is expected to sacrifice concert music for a quarter's worth of work on marches to please a half-time audience and President Shuck.

The marching band was reinstituted fall quarter of 1973. At that time the P.E. department paid the band $600 for its services during half-time. The money was used that spring to help provide the entire band with a two-day tour in the state of Washington to recruit new players from various high schools for the following fall. Since the fall of 1973 the P.E. dept. has not financed us anything for our services during the home game half-time shows.

In conclusion I'd like to say that the members of the band are there because it is required and because we want to play our instruments in an ensemble. We march because President Shuck says we must. It doesn't do anything for us musically and it's ironic because music enrichment and study is why we're in college majoring in music. With tuition as steep as it is, I feel we should be provided with the best musical opportunities possible. Marching band is not one of them.

STS Pulls Stunt

Dear Editor:

It appears that the Spokane Transit is attempting to use an old trick to end all bus service between Spokane and Cheney. Along with this, quite a few people, including Pat O'Donnell and Dennis Reedy are falling for the old stunt.

If memory serves me well, a number of years ago some railroads in this country decided to end passenger service and concentrate on freight service. So what did they do? The railroads increased fares, decreased service on passenger runs and let their equipment deteriorate. So what happened? After a while, many of the passenger trains were discontinued by the railroads due to lack of passengers.

And now STS is increasing fares, decreasing service, while maintaining that they will still lose money on the Magic Bus. They haven't begun using unsafe equipment yet that I know of, but maybe I shouldn't say that too quickly. On top of this, people such as O'Donnell and Reedy make statements such as, "...they (the students) would be justified in finding another means of getting to and from school" and "...maybe the whole Magic Bus operation should be scrapped." Sounds neat and final, but there are people in Spokane who don't own cars. There also are others who honestly believe that with the fuel and pollution problems we have in this country, alternative transportation systems such as buses should be utilized. What alternatives would these people have if the Magic Bus was discontinued? Perhaps they should go and thumb a ride on I-90, or should they pedal a 10-speed between Spokane and Cheney?

Are we going to permit STS to get away with ending bus service? Since it appears that money is always the problem, let's try to find alternative sources of funding and/or methods of economizing the service. Why not raise tuitions a little to further subsidize the Magic Bus? Better yet, how about applying pressure on the powers that be in Spokane to convince them that they should hire a new, local, manager to operate STS. That one move could solve many of the present problems. I do not have all the answers, but hopefully if enough people are concerned, some useful ideas can be found. Let's just not sit around and watch STS get away with financial murder.

Opinion

Mercy Killing; Is It Right?

DO YOU FEEL THAT THE FAMILY OR GUARDIAN SHOULD HAVE THE RIGHT TO SHUT OFF ARTIFICIAL LIFE SUPPORT SYSTEMS OF A TERMINALLY ILL PATIENT (MERCY KILLING)?

Fritz Rosekrans - Professor, Psychology; The definition of death needs to include brain function, so that shutting off life support would not constitute mercy killing. If the brain is dead, the person is either dead or in a college.

Suzanne Vickery - Senior, Elementary Education; No, I don't feel that the family of a terminally ill patient has the right to shut off artificial life support systems. I feel that God is the one who makes the ultimate decision. He will not allow a person to suffer unnecessarily.

Peter Grant - Sophomore, Sociology, Psychology; I would think that the family of Karen Quinlan, since they profess to be pious Catholics, should express more concern religiously, i.e., faith prayers, intercession from the Pope, etc. before making a final decision to terminate the girl's life. If all else fails let there be more examination of everyone's conscience before deciding the inevitable.

Lisa Learqain - Senior (W.S.U.) Nursing; Yes, I do believe that euthanasia should be legalized (in so many words). That way the significant persons will have the opportunity to make their own decision. If the family gives their OK (they've discussed the situation with a trained counselor), and the patient's doctor agrees to do it, then why not? Why keep a body living if it has no "life" remaining within it.

Ann Michaelsen - Sophomore, Psychology; I do feel that if a family has a family member with a terminal illness that it should most definitely be legalized to put that person out of pain. Why prolong the inevitable.

Bill Jones - Senior, History; I believe that each individual has the right, in the event of terminal illness to choose his time of death. If the patient is unable to make this decision I believe life should be terminated only when an EEG shows no brain function.

Nancy Nettles - Freshman, Mathematics; No, I feel that no one should make the choice between life and death of a terminally ill patient. God alone can choose. If the patient is to die, no support system will change the will of God.

Kay Johnston - R.N., Assistant Professor, Nursing; Ideally, the terminally ill person should be afforded the opportunity to make this decision prior to his or her death. Thus, if the patient early in his or her illness decided that extraordinary means to preserve his or her life were undesirable and so stated, there should be no decision making power left to family or guardian (thus, no issue). However, if this is not the case, then this decision to discontinue life by extraordinary means logically should be left to those family, etc. who presumably know the patient well enough to know what he or she would desire.

Pageant Tay - Senior, Eugenics; The end in sight keep death in; preserve the organism's most acid song of all. Yet we in unplugging the air hole, do so because we don't want, no NEVER that beloved singing. However—the sweet thing turning gray would expect a better audience.

Nick Galbreath-Senior, Psychology; Of course! What's wrong, don't you believe in population control or the idea of a master race. The idea of individual rights is supposedly of no importance is it? Doesn't everyone want a Utopian society where only the masters are in control? Fuck it! The earth sucks anyway!

Sue Frich-Junior, Social Work; I don't believe in it. It's playing God.

Kevin Taylor-Junior, Journalism; Well, yes, no and maybe. Every human being on this planet has the right to die, and more importantly, to live. For our medical and legal systems to callously allow people to function as vegetables via machinery is frightening beyond belief. However it would be equally frightening for a family or guardian to decide on the life or death of a terminally ill patient. This is an emotional question - the answer to which must come from the heart, never from the pocket book, the courts, or an administration.

'Last Tango' Opens Sat.

Last Tango in Paris presents Marlon Brando in his most open and forthright performance. Brando, whose screen career has seen both extremes, recovers his passionate quality after having portrayed the Godfather.

Co-starring with him is Maria Schneider, a 20-year-old unknown who was picked riskily by Director Bernardo Bertolucci.

Tango will play in the PUB Multi-purpose Room Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in a special showing. Admission is 50c and student ID will be required since the X-Rated program is not open to the public.

FM 89.9 Airborne

Through divine intervention, KEWC-FM 89.9 will begin broadcasting from its Dressler Hall antenna Sunday at noon.

"I don't know what happened," said general manager Larry Snider. "Last week the FCC was adamant about the paperwork and the January 1 date."

"This morning Dr. Howard Hopf got a telegram from them". This gave the station permission to go on the air immediately, Snider said. "I don't know who interceded in our behalf."

Snider and FM 89.9 station manager Dan Dagsaan will initiate the 24-hour, seven-day-a-week broadcasts on Sunday.

The station previously received permission to expand its school year broadcast schedule, according to Snider. "We've got the go ahead to operate next summer."

A staff of students is being recruited from the R-TV department to handle the air shifts and the station's new Rainbow format.

"We'll play a variety of music," Dagsaan said, "from classical to country and western. We'll include jazz, rock, soul and some easy listening between six a.m. and two p.m."

After two p.m. the station will relax into a free format, playing progressive rock and jazz. At the discretion of the air personalities, requests will be played.

Snider said that the station is recovering from the setbacks left by the delay. "We're regearing forces entirely, bringing in some of the news staff from the AM."

Several members of his staff left to find internships with Spokane radio stations when things looked dark for FM 89.9.

"The station is better than ever," said both Snider and Dagsaan.

"This is a student run station, stressing professional attitude. The only other media on campus is The Easterner," Dagsaan said.

Freshmen and sophomores usually work on KEWC-AM, as part of their R-TV class training. The FM positions are filled by seniors who need experience in production to qualify for jobs.

FM 89.9 will be the only non-commercial FM outlet in the Spokane area. With a signal strength of ten watts broadcasting from the highest point in Cheney, the station will reach to Spokane.

Tubes Are TV Screams

Look Out! Here Comes Video Rock

By Michael Heavener
Entertainment Editor

Alice Cooper's music attracts as many people to his concerts as his outrageous stage antics.

David Bowie's fans want to hear him sing during his insane performances.

The Tubes get none of this attention to their music. When they perform, people just come for the boggling effects of the stage show.

Which is a terrible shame, because the Tubes music is superior to either Bowie or Cooper.

Under the aegis of veteran producer Al Kooper, who started Blood, Sweat and Tears, the Tubes have recorded an album of A&M Records which captures the vast wasteland feeling of the American middle-class lifestyle.

The fascination with television that comes across on the first record is natural, since they portray television at its very McLuhanesque grossest on stage.

They claim to vignette every TV show the American culture has yet spawned in the seven-act-with-complete costuming, two-hour, live and video-taped performance.

Yet this album negates the majority theory that the tubes are just a show band. Even with a reputation of seeing is disbelieving, to listen to them is to enjoy the band's potential.

Every member is a competent studio musician and several have toured with George Harrison and Nicky Hopkins. They originally hailed from Phoenix, Arizona, where they played standard gig fare, failing to distinguish themselves.

After splitting to San Francisco, they experimented with pre-meditated funk and on-stage obscenities reminiscent of John and Yoko.

They finally settled on a TV multi-image for the mind-tripping glitter-rock effect that youthful audiences crave but which leaves everyone fatigued and confused.

The best way to describe the Tubes sound is to compare it to other groups. They are imitably a product of the American "anything goes" music scene, combining styles, delivery and even specific motifs from past and present recording artists.

Tubes won't ever be a street band, being too intimately tied to the stage. But this album could easily give the casual appearance of having been made down on the corner, a sort of Willy and the Poor Boys with a mobile TV studio at hand.

The most appealing cut takes a poignant Mexican love ballad, mates it to a flashing flamenco beat and then plays the whole thing at rock and roll speed.

The tune, Malaguena Salerosa, doesn't sound contrived. Instead it's reminiscent of the early Beach Boys timing and harmony.

Mondo Bondage combines E, L & P with Z Z Tops for an electric surprise that puts KISS to shame. The Tubes use phase-shifting in a new and innovative manner, breaking the usual long glissandos into short, choppy, breathy sections.

The song which is number one on the California FM airwaves is White Punks on Dope, an immensely dancable track with some down-to-earth instrumentals.

A background chorus on this and several other songs lends a science fiction touch by invoking memories of 2001: A Space Odyssey.

The instrumental articulation on the Tubes album is excellent. The sound separation and mixing are superb. The engineering generally makes the album worthwhile listening.

All through the effort, the Tubes come across as an English band which their command of the musical scene helps. Boy Crazy is the kind of rocker David Bowie could do if he understood the way middle-class American youth act and think.

But the song that makes everything fall into place is What Do You Want From Life, a philosophical treatment combining the American Dream with Firesign Theatre.

It ends with a montage of modern products that goes so fast it demands total attention. "If you're an American citizen you're entitled to: Boy Dylan's new unlisted phone number, a fool proof plan and an airtight alibi, a Las Vegas wedding, a Mexican divorce, 38 different types of automobile, and a McCulloch chainsaw."

Don't make the mistake of thinking the Tubes are bad because they have quality sounding album and still do a nasty stage show.

They are at once frighteningly mundane and fascinatingly prophetic, or perhaps profetic.

Like them or hate them, but make the most of them because they may be the last to rise out of the mediocrity that is America today.

Tower Of Power's Horns Get Mellow

By Ray Spanjer
Staff Writer

Since Tower of Power's beginning, playing the nightclub circuit some four years ago, the group has been considered both mediocre and fantastic.

Their appeal to audiences varies, but all must agree that the group has radically progressed since their "Disco" sets at Stateline Idaho.

Tower of Power's Sunday night appearance at the Coliseum was a welcome change from some of the erratic, inconsistent concerts associated with the group in the past.

Although the crowd was small, (only about half of the hall was filled) it was anything but unreceptive, as Tower of Power ran through some of their soul-sounding tunes.

Tower of Power is unique, in that they have the personnel and talent to get into funky songs like Down to the Nightclub or Soul Fascination, while still able to move into an easy listening ballad like So Very Hard to Go or You're Still a Young Man.

Horns Dominate

The band's main sound comes from their fantastic sounding horns. The brass section is tight and well synchronized. The full sound emanating from the five-man section would lead one to believe he was listening to a quality recording rather than a live concert.

The band brought their own sound system to the concert Sunday night which proved to be a blessing because the sound was well-mixed and flawless.

Herbert Tubbs, the group's lead vocalist, handled some of the band's soul-type love songs with a tone-perfect voice not usually associated with Tower of Power's singers in the past.

Crowd Enthusiastic

By the time the ten-man group had finished with their opening numbers, over 30 people had leaped over the stage barrier to bump to the music.

As the stage lights went down signalling the end of the concert, the scanty audience rose spontaneously to their feet, and inside of a minute the band was back on stage.

Tower of Power is unlike other bands in that they do not focus on one individual. Each member fills a niche in the group's soothing sound. Sunday night's concert marked a high quality performance by some very talented musicians.

Judo Club Deadline Today

By Jim Waggoner

Saturday afternoon. Like millions of other sports-minded Americans I decided to attend a major college football contest. Shoving the books aside, I phoned an associate and after a few minutes of indecision over a predictably tasteless Saturday Tawanka lunch, we headed for Spokane's Joe Albi Stadium where WSU and UCLA were tangling in a Pacific 8 encounter.

Because of our late decision we were destined to arrive late. In fact, we listened to the entire first quarter on the radio while cruising on the freeway.

One of the dominant factors in our decision was the mutual belief that we could purchase a cheap (hopefully $1.50) general admission ticket at the gate.

But when we finally arrived and inquired about ticket prices we engaged in the following conversation:

"How much for a couple of general admission tickets," I inquired.

"Are you a student," the man replied.

"Yes, a student at Eastern Washington State College," I unhesitatingly said.

"Well, that will be four dollars apiece."

What??? Thinking the man was joking, I glanced at my friend for some support. But he had taken the information literally and was shaking his head in disbelief. "Have we come to the wrong stadium? There must be a professional game being played here today," he grumbled.

Now withdrawn in total confusion, I was revived by the ticket seller's voice, "It's a great day for football and the weather is perfect," he said.

Temporarily soothed by his kind voice and rejecting the unpleasant thought of travelling 50 miles for nothing, we doled out the eight dollars, allowing us to enter the stadium amidst a throng of security officers.

But throughout the game I was preoccupied not only by the ticket incident but by a Sports Illustrated report I had read a few days earlier. The short article cited three examples of how major college football is alarmingly reaching professional win-at-all-costs extremes.

One midwestern college coach was criticized after his nationally ranked club was tied two weeks in a row. He responded by saying he didn't care what the fans thought.

Another midwest coach opted to go for a one point conversion to tie a highly ranked team. The kick failed and the disgruntled coach locked the press out of the locker room after the game.

And a southern head coach saw a man jogging around the track while his team was practicing. Thinking the jogger was a "spy" from another school, the coach called the campus police and had the man jailed. The "spy" was a math professor at the same institution.

Admittedly, major college football is fastpaced and exciting. But when the fans who support the programs and the student-athletes themselves are exploited for monetary purposes, perhaps the system needs re-evaluating.

By Bill Bighaus
Sports Writer

Attendance is down but the enthusiasm is up as Eastern's Judo Club kicked off its third season of classes and competition last week.

Cal Hayashi, head instructor of the club, said today is the last day for those interested in joining the club to sign up. The club meets in the Phase II wrestling room on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:30.

Last year, Judo Club had 35 men and women enrolled, but Hayashi doesn't know how many he will have this year. The first practice drew about 20 people, most of them returnees from last year.

The cost for joining the club is two dollars a quarter. Hayashi said the cost is kept low because "I don't want people obligated and just taking the class because they paid for it."

Open To Beginners

He said he started the club because he enjoys teaching Judo and wants to work with the people who are really interested in learning or improving their knowledge of Judo. The class is open to beginners and more advanced students.

An Eastern senior, Hayashi has been active in Judo for the past 16 years and is a third degree black belt. He has competed in two national tournaments.

He is assisted by Neil McCuddin, a first degree black belt, who taught last year. Ford Yonago, holder of a second degree black belt is also back as an instructor.

Hayashi said that he and his instructors teach faster than most instructors because "college kids are more mature so we can scoot right along." He feels his teaching method pays off.

"If people will stick with me they will know what Judo is all about," he said.

Safety Stressed

Hayashi says he keeps an "easy going" atmosphere in the classes but they do learn quickly what Judo is about. Safety is stressed. Exercises to help the student fall without getting hurt and stretching exercises to loosen muscles are taught. After the exercises they get down to practicing.

A lot of people take the class as a sort of self defense course, but Hayashi says he tries to shy away from just the self defense aspect of Judo.

"Judo is a good form of physical education. It develops the mind to work with the body," Hayashi said. "I make the grasp the basics of Judo before we even go into self defense."

Hayashi told his first class, "If you think you can walk out of here and knock down walls and bust heads you are in the wrong class."

He said the curiosity in martial arts entices people.

"People associate Judo with Kung Fu and Bruce Lee," he said. "This shows they don't know what Judo is about."

"The Gentle Way"

Judo is derived from Jujitsu which was the traditional Japanese fighting art. In 1882, a man named Jigaro Kano refined the highly competitive, dangerous form of fighting, eliminating harmful techniques and changing rules and regulations for safety in practice. The end result was Judo "The Gentle Way."

This "Gentle Way" of Judo is a mixture of spiritual and physical conditioning which is the major goal Hayashi hopes to achieve in teaching his classes.

"Eastern is also making a bid for the Northwest Collegiate Judo Championships this spring," he said.

On Oct. 4, Keiko Fukuda, a six degree black belt and the world's highest ranking woman, taught a clinic at Eastern that drew 60 top instructors and students from the Northwest. Hayashi says he hopes to have other guest instructors in his classes this year.

Gymnasts Preparing Nine Letterman Return

To perpetuate a 7-1 record with claims to third place in the NAIA championships in 1967, plus another 7-1 record in 1968, coach Jack Benson's men's gymnastic program is rolling with a full head of steam straight for their opening meet with WSU on November 19.

Constituting the strength of the team are returning lettermen Ken Rux, Kurt Nagashima, Al Smith, Marty Rask, Chris Bolkan, Kurt Steinheiser, Dave Millard, Dave Sealy, Kurt Luhrs, and transfer student Jose Villahermosa.

"The upcoming schedule will be very competitive as usual," said Benson, "including meets with schools such as WSU, Portland State, and traditionally tough UW."

Speaking quite confidently of the team Benson said, "This year's team should prove to be a respectable one with more depth than last year. I foresee some outstanding individual performances along with a brighter, more exciting exhibition by the whole team."

Eagle Harriers Running Well

EWSC runners Terry Greenman, Tim Caria, and Rick Babero took 4th, 5th, and 6th places respectively, out of the top six finishers during the Eastern Washington Invitational Cross-Country Meet Saturday on Eastern's 5.1 mile campus course.

No team scores were calculated for the meet because of incomplete team participation. Had team scores been recorded, SCC would have taken top honors as the first three places were filled by Sasquatches.

Defense Dominates Women's Football

By Dave Stocker Sports Writer

Playing with savageness and intensity that would astound even the most dedicated armchair quarterbacks, the women took to the flag football fields for six games last week.

Low scorings contests dominated the week's play, with two overtime games and five shutouts among the week's contests.

In the week's action:

Savage House 1, Party Pak O — Savage House squeaked out a victory under the tie breaker rule in this hard defensive battle.

Chumpettes 19, Huddlers O — The Huddler defense could not stop the offensive weapon of Sonshine Rodgers as she passed for two scores and ran for the third Chumpette touchdown.

Goofy's Crazy Eagles 1, Party Pak O — Party Pak lost its second overtime game of the week when the Eagles' Debbie Sieverkopp intercepted a pass on the third overtime play.

Huddlers 8, Savage House O — With four plays left in the game, Mo Dowling took an outside pitch from quarterback Sue Smith and scampered 13 yards down the sideline for the score.

Baseball End Near

Intramural Baseball moves into its final week of play with only one undefeated team remaining. Steve Meyers' team No. 6 leads the league with a 4-0 record. Randy Rices' team No. 2 is close behind with a 3-1 record, and Scott Pluckers' team No. 4 and Rick Pearson's team No. 2 are two games behind with 2-2 records. Games are played at 3:00 p.m. on the varsity baseball diamond.

Football Playoffs Near

After the second week of play, four teams still remain unbeaten in Men's flag football contests. Western Division leaders Hawaii Five-O and the Dildoes are on a collision course with 3-0 marks. The Western crown may well be decided in the Monday, October 27 clash between the two teams. Game time is 3:30 p.m. on flag field No. 1.

Jaws sits atop the Eastern league with a 3-0 record, but the Lame Ducks and Pikes are only a half-game behind at 3-1.

Wool is still the dominant force in the Central Division at 4-0, with Little Deuce Coupe right behind at 3-1.

Flag football playoffs begin next week. First-round action begins on Wednesday, October 29, at 3:30, continuing through to Friday, October 31.

And now, the numbers —

Dildoes 42, Original Nads O — The Dildoes have yet to be scored upon, and have given up only four first downs in four games.

Lame Ducks 8, Pikes 2 — A 35-yard Marty Martinson-to-Tim Parcher pass sealed the win for the Lame Ducks.

Nurds 34, Esparalo O — Exploiting the Esparalo defense for five touchdown passes, three to Mike Swatzke, quarterback Ed Paine guided the Nurds to an easy win.

Hawaii Five-O 22, Original Nads O — Greg Solomon scored on a 50-yard run, and Willie Dunston scored on a 35-yard run and a 10-yard interception return to pace Five-O.

Jaws 34, Nurds 13 — Steve Banks' three interceptions, Greg Mitchell's two touchdown runs, and Ed Ash's two touchdown passes kept the Nurds in check all afternoon.

Scheduling Note — A reminder to check your schedules. All flag football games will start at 3:00 p.m. and 4:00 p.m. one-half hour earlier than usual.

Western Hammers Eagles, 31-6 Red Raiders Next EvCo Foe

By Jim Waggoner Sports Editor

Western Washington unleashed three first half "big plays" enroute to a 31-6 thrashing of Eastern last Saturday night in Evergreen Conference football action. The loss all but eliminates Eastern from EvCo championship contention.

Recapturing the "Axe Trophy" which the Eagles possessed the last two years, Western registered their first win of the season after four consecutive setbacks. Both clubs are 1-2 in conference play and 1-4 overall.

The Vikings avenged last year's 64-0 Eastern victory, the worst loss in Western football history.

And the revenge-minded Vikings wasted little time in getting things rolling as they scored on their first possession with quarterback Phil Mendelson tossing a 42-yard touchdown pass to Hoyt Gier less than two minutes into the contest.

They exploded again early in the second period as Mendelson unloaded a 74-yard scoring bomb to Gier. And before intermission Viking Bob Fenton rambled 51 yards to lift the home squad out front 19-0.

Altshuler Scores

Eastern's defensive unit was responsible for the lone Eagle touchdown as lineman Bob Altshuler picked up a Mendelson fumble and scampered 14 yards to paydirt.

Western exploded for a pair of second half touchdowns while stifling Eastern's lackluster offensive attack.

The Eagles have been out-scored 138-34 in five contests this season.

Fenton scored on a two-yard run in the third period as the Vikings paraded 81 yards in a time-consuming drive.

Viking sub signal-caller Terrill Morgan slashed across the goal from three yards out to finish the scoring.

Southern Oregon Next

The outlook certainly doesn't appear much better for the struggling Eagle eleven. Saturday they travel to Southern Oregon for an EvCo clash with the Red Raiders, who are currently co-leaders of the conference race.

The once-beaten Oregon outfit (a non conference setback) have a dangerous passing attack led by QB Tony Harrington and a potent running game with halfback Dennis Shields always a scoring threat.

Sports Writers Falter in Poll

An old saying is "When better predictions are made, sports writers won't make them." This held true as Eastern News Editor Doug Sly and Eagle cross-country coach Mike Johnson finished one-two in the Eagle Football Forecast following last week's games. Three sports writers pulled up the rear.

Sly led the pack with a 23-6 (.793) mark while Johnson hit for a 22-7 (.758) record. Sports Editor Jim Waggoner and sports writer Bill Bighaus tied with records of 20-9 (.689). Another sports writer Dave Stocker spent his first week on the forecast in the cellar managing only a 19-10 (.655) mark.
